HE present Seniors entered the halls of Intermountain in 1925 with ninety-six students, the largest class in the history of the college. After numerous and exciting conflicts with the Sophomores they entered their second year of college life, diminished somewhat in numbers, but still strong in pep and enthusiasm. This year was closed with the class proud of the fact that they were the only class ever to win the Freshman-Sophomore debate and the tug-of-war both years.

The Prickly Pear put out in their Junior year was a credit to the school and the members of the staff, and the students looked forward with great anticipation to their Senior year.

As Seniors, they had led many activities, and have come to the close of their college life with many happy reminiscences and much loyalty to I. U. C.

JUNIORS

IKE sheep without a shepherd, Intermountain's present Junior Class approached the halls of the venerable institution in the fall of 1926. Eighty-three strong, they swarmed over the campus, enduring the agony of English classifying exams and Sophomore hazing and enjoying the initiation into Intermountain good times. The class was soon organized with able officers and the "I" was painted in record time. Freshmen formed the majority of the football team; and the class was also proud to be able to claim the football captain for the next year, Ivan Hodges. Basketball showed new abilities in the class of '30 when they won the interclass tournament two years in succession; and track has always had its quota of participants from their ranks.

Returning the fall of '27, the class, somewhat fewer in numbers but nowise diminished in pep, threw itself into the pleasures of initiating Freshmen, scrimmaging on the football field, and joining honorary organizations. Later in the year, debate and oratory engaged its attention, and it was honored in having one of its members, Don Baldwin, win the State Oratorical Championship. Aside from their athletic prowess, their scholastic standing, and their dramatic ability, the Juniors have always ranked high in journalistic activities, the Collegian having been edited by one of the class for two years and numerous others being on the staff. And now that the Prickly Pear and the Junior-Senior banquet are safely things of the past, the class feels itself ready to embark without trepidation upon the unquiet seas of Seniorhood.

A CCORDING to the Greek, the word "Sophomore" means "Fool." But Scripture says that he who knows he is foolish is wise. The Sophomores of Intermountain claim to be neither wise or foolish, but if Intermountainism is foolish, they merit the name of "Sophomores" in the Greek sense of the word.

The good Greek is athletic, and the Sophomores are contributing much to the school in this respect. As Freshmen, they became so Intermountainized that a larger proportion returned last fall as Sophomores than almost any other class can boast. The enforcement of green hat wearing has occasioned many interesting events in the past year. In inter-class affairs the Sophomores have been unusually fortunate. One-half of the Men's Glee Club personnel are Sophomores. In participation in school events and affairs, they have been working for school interests during two years and will continue to do so until graduation.

In a great and large sense they are true to those ideals and ideas for which Intermountain stands.

A CHRONICLE OF THE FRESHMAN CLASS

1 And it came to pass that the children of the whole congregation, five and forty strong, did come unto the Temple of Learning in the year 1928.

2. And it came to pass that the saplings1 did fear the name of King Edward and his elders from the temple.

3. And the young lions2 roared after their prey and the King did aid and abet them in their ravaging. And a great battle was fought and the saplings stood mightily against their foes.

4. When the time had come they took unto themselves a great leader3; and many of the sons were called for service upon the field4, where they did acquit themselves with great strength, vanquishing even the lions in a mighty struggle.

5. Yet it pleased the King that those which had shown themselves worthy in the minds of the elders were endowed with marks known as Passing Grades, and the green ones were said to be advanced in the first year's work.

6. And the King said: "Depart ye. Go from thence."

FOOTBALL

COACH ASH.

Coach Ash has proved himself to be a veritable miracle man in the matter of building up Intermountain's lost athletic prestige. In football he completely switched the positions of the men until he had built a machine with a stone wall line and a backfield that possessed all of the smashing attributes of a locomotive. In basketball he sifted out five of the candidates for positions who could shoot, guard and play the floor. As a result of this combination the Panther Hoopsters were submerging their opponents with bewildering regularity toward the last of the season. In track the Panthers presented some men who were crowding the state records in their performances.

Mr. Ash had the unbounded respect of every man in the school, which, when placed with his knowledge of athletics and his ability to put his knowledge across, accounts for his success here this year.

THE SQUAD.

It isn't very large in numbers, but what it lacks in numbers it makes up in fight and spirit. The Panther Football squad this year has excelled both in size and indomitable will to win the squads of several years previous. Practicing under trying conditions at times and playing against large odds in some of their games are incidents in the life of any squad which is apt to diminish the interest manifested in the sport. But not so the Panthers. They were out there all of the time, whether it be practice or game. Injuries played a devastating part in the football program this year but in spite of these and other handicaps the team fought on. The squad will be nearly intact in membership next year, which means that things are going to happen on the gridiron.

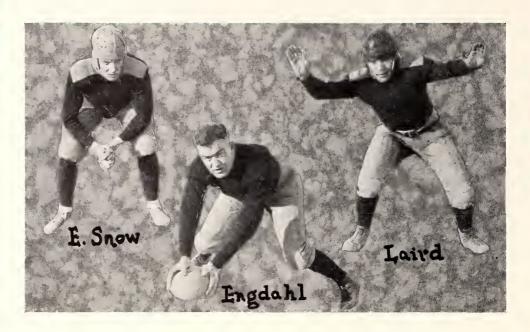

Captain Culver

Mac steered the old eleven through some difficult situations, and captained one of the most successful football teams Intermountain has had for several years. He had the confidence and co-operation of his men at all times, and backed their work by his own ability as a sure tackler on defense and a crafty back on offense.

Captain-Elect Wilson

Skinny was shifted to the line this year, and as a result of his showing in the tackle position was chosen for the second all state team. He knows the game thoroughly and has the weight and scrap necessary to employ this knowledge to a good advantage. Skinny is also a backfield man of no mean ability. He will do big things next year.

Ebo Snow—Fullback.

The "Punting Panther" finished his second season at Intermountain this year. His punting which has won him state-wide renown, has been a big factor in keeping the team out of tight holes, and in getting them out if they did get in.

Harold Engdahl—Center.

The Panthers will feel keenly the loss of their star center next year. Engdahl filled the center bill in every way this year and was outplayed by no opposing center during the entire season.

Joe Laird—Guard.

Joe was always dependable and always in the thick of the scrap making things miserable for the opposition. Joe graduates this year. We hope he has a brother.

THE SEASON

THE BOBKITTEN GAME

The game with the Bobkitten, which was played here, was a tragedy of intercepted Intermountain passes. The final score amounted to 18-9 in the Kittens favor. All of the scoring was done in the last two quarters, at which time the air was black with Panther passes. Two intercepted passes for touchdowns paved the way for a Kitten victory. Neither team would open up to any great extent and were content to play warily and safely.

Don Snow—Guard.

Don has been the source of a lot of irritation to the opponents' line this year. He fights hard and consistently—and is coming back for two more years.

Oliver Peterson—Tackle.

Pete experienced quite a little hard luck this year in the shape of serious leg injuries, but was there whenever possible, and sometimes when he shouldn't have been, giving all he had for the team. Pete has another season yet.

Ivan Hodges—Tackle.

Hodges possesses all of the elements of a good football man—sincerity, fight and knowledge of the game. He seldom misses a tackle, and his favorite sport is breaking up plays before they start. One more year for Ivan.

THE SEASON

THE BILLINGS POLY GAME

In the second game of the season the Panthers blossomed out in all of their glory to smother the Poly men to the tune of 31-6. Passes, line-bucks, and long end runs were all used to good effect. The Panther defense was working well and held the Billings men to one touchdown.

Yale Lyman—Guard.

An attack of pneumonia held Yale out of things at the first of the season but he made up for it when he got into the game later. Yale is fast and scrappy—a combination hard to beat. One more try at it for Yale.

Theron Strange—Guard.

Strange's outstanding characteristics are dependability and consistency. He has another year to go and will make a strong bid for the guard position next year.

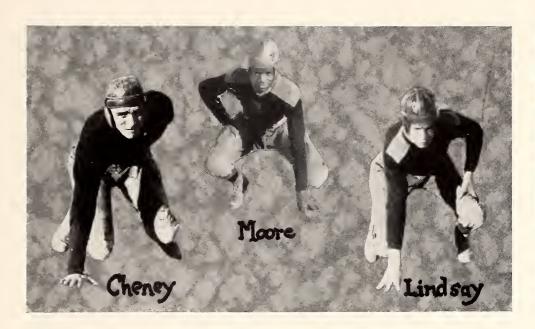

Pat Gilfeather—End.

Pat is Irish and coupled to that is the fact that he can grab passed from anywhere. Pat will be back next year and his three years of college football will stand him in good stead. He can be depended upon.

THE SEASON

THE SAINT'S GAME

The Saints invaded the Panther camp and in the course of the afternoon chalked up a very one-sided score. For the most part the game was good, but the shifty and evenly-balanced backfield of the Hilltoppers unleashed a series of long end runs in the final quarters which the Panthers were unable to check.

Truman Cheney—Tackle.

This was Cheney's first year but he gave a good account of himself. He will be an outstanding contender for a steady place on the team next year.

Arthur Moore—End.

Moore was one of the slipperiest ends that has grabbed a pass for the Panthers for several years. He also played quarterback with equal skill. Two more years await Art.

John Lindsay—Halfback.

Always fighting and using his height and weight to the best advantage, Red was in every play. He was always dependable in both offensive and defensive play.

THE SEASON

THE MINES GAME

The whole school accompanied the Panthers over to Butte to witness their conflict with the School of Mines. The game was featured by passes—long passes, short passes, good passes, and bad passes. The pigskin was thrown 215 yards for completed passes and a mile or two for those not completed. It was a good game, nevertheless, and the Panthers outclassed their opponents in nearly every department of the game. The Miners won by two touchdowns gained from intercepted passes.

Donald Horsley-End.

Horsley is a little fellow with lots of grit. He can always be counted on to do his bit, and is an exceptional tackler.

John Lane—Center.

John's play at center this year left very little to be desired. His passes were accurate and swift. He will no doubt be holding down a regular berth on the squad next year.

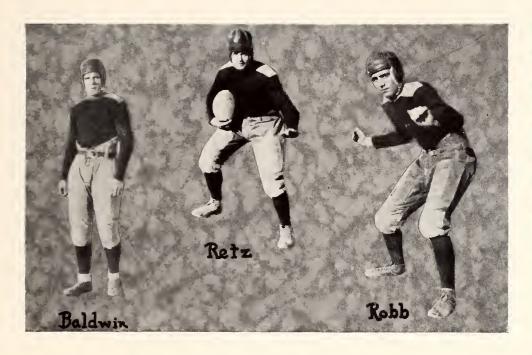

James Noel—Fullback.

Buddy is a triple threat man with two hundred pounds of weight to back him up. He has a thorough knowledge of the game and is a valuable player in all departments of the game.

THE SEASON

THE POCATELLO GAME.

What was described by those who saw it as being the best game of the season, took place when the Panthers met the eleven from the University of Idaho, Southern Branch, at Pocatello. It was a fight from start to finish with the Panthers playing the greatest football of their career. The Idaho men were in top form also, and the battle was glorious to behold. The Panthers lost by one touchdown, finally, but not because they were outplayed.

Kenneth Baldwin-Halfback.

Baldwin's passing and line-smashing were his chief assets. He fights cleanly and consistently and puts everything he has into every game.

Ernest Retz—Halfback.

Ernie was the fastest and shiftiest man in the backfield. He was hard to tackle and made a specialty of open field running. Retz has three more years to go.

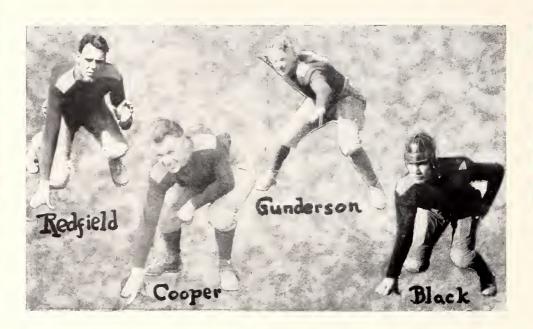

Robert Robb—End.

Robb is a pass catcher and tackler of no small repute. He plays a fast, hard game and is fighting all of the time. Two more years for him.

THE SEASON

THE DILLON GAME

The Panthers trekked to Dillon and then trekked back again bringing a 27-13 victory with them. It was another muddy field affair in which the heavy Panther line and fleet backfield worked well together. The feminine element at the Normal didn't appear to hold any grudges against the Panther men after the game, judging from tales which are told concerning the affair.

Donald Redfield—Guard.

Don mastered the fundamentals of football in a remarkably short time, but a serious injury forced him out of the game before the end of the season. Another try for Don next year.

Lyle Cooper—Halfback.

Injured early in the season, Lyle wasn't given the chance to show all of his ability. He will be back next year, though, at which time we expect things of him.

Carl Gunderson—End.

Swede's indomitable spirit won the Panthers lots of yardage this year and robbed their opponents of considerable amount. He is fast and a fighter—and will be back next year.

James Black—Halfback.

Jimmie can pass, run, and kick, which puts him up in the list of backfield men. He is a heady player and uses his experience to an advantage. Three more years for Jimmie.

BASKETBALL

Ernest Retz-Forward.

Retz proved an invaluable man on the basketball court. His floor work and basket shooting were exceptional, and his speed make him a hard man to guard.

THE SEASON: A Resume

Intermountain had, during the current year, the most successful basketball season that has been experienced for some time. Starting with a group of clever but individual players, Coach Ash successfully accomplished the task of moulding them into a well balanced and smooth running quintet. The first five games were lost but the last five were won by large and decisive margins. Each game saw a stronger and more confident team on the floor for the Panthers, and from a 50-28 defeat at the hands of the five from the School of Mines, the Panthers soared to a final 76-12 victory over the Eastern Normal. The season included games with the Mines, Pocatello, Billings Poly., St. Charles, and the Eastern Normal of Billings.

Mac Culver-Forward.

Experience, speed and ability to handle the ball enabled Mac to land a berth on the first string without difficulty. This year was Mac's third on the Panther squad.

John Lindsay—Center.

Red got his share of the tip-offs and was in every play. His guarding was good, and his floor work consistent.

THE SEASON

THE DILLON GAME

The Dillon Teachers came over here the first part of March, and then went home on the short end of the score. The entire Intermountain Student Body was out to see the conflict and the Panther men well repaid their support. The forwards were invincible and the guards were impregnable, which is a bad combination to fight. The Teachers could not fight it with any success and another victory was chalked up for the Panthers.

Ebo Snow—Center.

Ebo plays a whirlwind of a game, and is especially good in getting the tip-offs. This was Ebo's second year on the court.

Lou Asay—Guard.

Lou played a clean and consistent game in the guard position, and frequently grabbed the opportunity to ring in a basket from center floor. Three more years are waiting for Lou.

THE SEASON

AT POCATELLO

The second day of February saw the Panthers go down to defeat to the tune of 46-39 at the hands of the Idaho men. The Pocatello five had not then been defeated and readily admitted that the Panthers offered the most aggressive front seen there.

James Black-Guard.

Jimmie is a good floor man and a heady player. He is able to play any position on the team and is an all around valuable man to the squad.

Harold Houtz-Forward.

Houtz, because of his ability to shoot baskets and his speed, played in several games with the first string. This was his first year so we look for big things from him in the future.

THE SEASON

POCATELLO HERE.

This game was a case of revenge in which the Panthers clawed out a 46-32 victory over the Idaho men. The Idaho men were scrappy and the Panthers had to give all they had. Even then it was not until the last few minutes of play that a 29-29 tie was broken and the Panthers took a lead which they never lost. The aggressiveness of both teams and the speed of play featured the game.

TRACK

Track at Intermountain this year did not loom up as large as it did last year. There was a dearth of good material for one thing, and inclement weather did its part in preventing progress in the field events. Only one meet was scheduled and that with Helena High. It was romped away with by the Panther men, and without giving some of them a good tryout.

Retz walked away with several events and won himself the chance to participate in the intercollegiate meet at the University. Retz's specialty is the broad jump and he was clearing 21 feet at the close of the season.

Trumbull, the veteran miler and half-miler showed well in the class meet and in the meet with the High School. He represented Intermountain at the intercollegiate in those two events.

Donald Snow blossomed out this spring and startled every one with his performance in the two-mile run. Don seems to have unlimited endurance. He was handicapped early in the season because of an inability to sprint at the finish of his race. He overcame this later on, however. He represented the Panthers at the intercollegiate meet in the two-mile event.

Ebo Snow is a high jumper and pole vaulter of state-wide renown. During the class meet he cleared the bar in the jump 6 feet and $\frac{1}{2}$ inch. Ebo trains harder than any man in school and is always in the pink of condition. He journeyed over to the intercollegiate meet and entered in the high jump.

Doles came to the front in the dashes during the class meet, and although he did not pull his time down enough to warrant his participation in the big meet at Missoula he crowded th eschool record here in both the century and 220 yard dashes.

Redfield is a weight man and a discus thrower. He covered himself with glory in the class and High School meets.

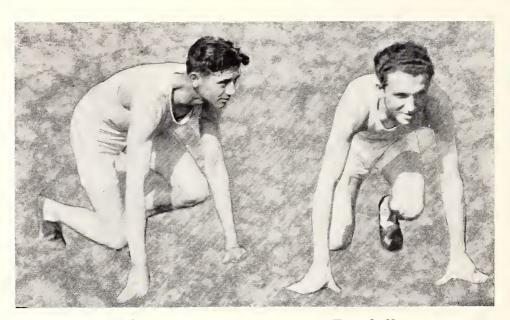

Lauson is a sprint man, whenever he comes out. He has worlds of speed but was unable to put it to use this year.

Lane is a middle distance runner of no mean ability, and performed creditably during the class meet.

TENNIS

Wampler

Conrad

Bennett

Tennis was slow in getting started this spring but when it did get under way it went off with a bang. A tournament was instituted which ended too late for us to get the results in the Prickly Pear.

Wampler has been the college champion for a number of years and is well worthy of the position. He plays a steady, clever game and is equally good at any part of the court. Norms tennis days at Intermountain are over since he graduated this spring, and we hate to lose him. He has always been willing to work on the courts, and has been a constant force in keeping tennis a live sport at Intermountain.

Wafford Conrad is a new man on the courts but he has shown some exceptional ability. Conrad plays a flashy game and fancy strokes are his specialties. He is a heady player, being as effective at the net as he is at the back court.

Fletcher Bennett has been runner up for college honors for the last two years and is a dangerous contender this year. Fletch plays a cool, calm, deliberate game and never becomes fussed no matter what the odds against him are. He is especially dangerous in the matter of long back court drives, while his height and agility give his an added advantage at the net.

THE SEASON

There have been no intercollegiate contests in tennis forthcoming this spring so the Panther racket-wielders were unable to prove their real worth in outside games. A year ago our men made a clean sweep of a series of singles and doubles tilts with the State College, but with this we had to be content. No other games were available at that time and this spring no games whatever appear. It is discouraging. We hope for a full schedule next spring.

WOMEN'S ATHLETICS

MISS CLIFFORD

W. A. A.—THE SEASON

The activities of W. A. A. were unusually successful this year. Early in the fall, Freshman girls became interested in the work, and we soon had a group of energetic girls out, who were willing to work hard for those coveted points for W. A. A. membership Hiking was the main activity of the fall quarter, but some of the girls also took up riding and swimming. The winter quarter was not so successful as had been planned. Handicapped by the lack of a gym and by the cold weather, the girls were unable to have the basketball tournament which they had hoped to make the chief event of the season.

When warmer weather came, however, the campus was once again alive with fair co-eds, industriously working. Hiking was climaxed by a glorious hike to Rimini, where the girls spent the night, returning the following day; horseback riding was continued for a short time, and swimming tests were given and easily passed. Track was another activity in which the girls were able to use their energy, for every morning at 5:30 a faithful track squad was out, practicing jumping, javeline, discus, hurdles and sprints. And then of course baseball! But the outstanding event of the spring quarter was the all-school tennis tournament sponsored by W. A. A. Each class held its elimination contest and sent representatives to the finals. With the star athletes back for the coming year, we are looking forward to another successful season.

HE W. A. A. of Intermountain seeks the promotion of athletics for women. All who earn 100 points through participation in activities fostered by the association automatically become W. A. A. members. The point system used is as follows: 100 points membership in W. A. A.; 300 points, "I" pin; 500 points, initials on pin; 1000 points, "I" sweater; 1200 points, "I" blanket. The activities sponsored by the organization are swimming, hiking, tennis, track, and horseback riding.

A lack of equipment and a small student body are prominent handicaps to the association's growth; nevertheless, it fills an important and necessary place in the extra-curricular training of the women students. Miss Myrtle A. Clifford, director of women's athletics, is the advisor.

HE motto of the Philodorian Literary Society is "Desirous of All Good," and it has attempted to carry this out in all its activities. After a quarter of excellent programs, a large and talented group of new members was added to the society roll this year. The two initiatory programs which they put on showed unusual promise and originality. The biggest affairs of the year, as far as the literary societies were concerned, was the inter-society debate, which for the third time was won by the Philodorians, thus making them the permanent possessors of the Schaeffer debate cup.

Debate and Oratory

The debate schedule this year included four debates, two for the women's team and two for the men's teams. The schedule was to have been longer, and a trip was even contemplated, but unfortunately arrangements could not be completed. The season opened with a contest with the woman's team at Dillon, in which Jean Starr and Dorothy Welch won by a two to one decision. As this was the first year either of the two girls had gone out, their record was all the more commendable.

On April 1 was held the most formidable debate of the season, that with the team from Baylor University, Waco, Texas. Ralph Micken and Donald Redfield upheld the affirmative of the official Pi Kappa Delta question, Resolved: That a substitute for the trial-by-jury plan should be adopted; and won by an audience decision over the Texas debaters.

The Eastern Normal School sent a team to meet Intermountain debaters, and Yale Lyman and Leroy Powell again upheld the affirmative of the question. Although it was a no-decision debate, both participants did very creditable work. The woman's team finished the season by meeting the School of Mines. The Intermountain girls debated the negative of the question and made a good impression upon the audience. This, however, was again a no-decision debate, and those who heard it were left to form their own opinions.

A great deal of interest was shown in oratory during the winter quarter. Those who took part in the school contest were required to submit their orations in writing and the seven best were picked from these. In the contest held on March 6, Norman Wampler won first place. Mr. Wampler also represented Intermountain at Butte in the State Oratorical contest.

The Debate Group

Six students, under the guidance and direction of Coach of Debate, W. A. Hackett, represented Intermountain in all of its debates this year.

LeRoy Powell and Dorothy Welch, both Freshmen, exhibited unusual talent in this field. Both are fluent speakers and showed eleverness and originality in their constructive speeches as well as in the rebuttal.

Jean Starr, the only Sophomore of the group, was particularly forceful in her style of speaking. Although she seldom employed high-sounding oratorical terms, she gained her point by the quiet power she instilled in her argument.

Yale Lyman and Donald Redfield, Juniors, were characterized by the smoothness and evenness of their speeches. Both of these men are experienced debaters and made good use of their experience by employing, to their advantage, nearly every trick known in debate circles.

Ralph Micken, the lone Senior of the group, was outstanding in the field of flashing oratory and flowing eloquence. Especially in the rebuttal speeches did he unleash a verbal barrage that overwhelmed his opponents. He never failed to carry his point.

DRAMATICS

Lyceum Quartet

NE of Prof. Hackett's biggest contributions to Intermountain this year was the training of a group of talented players in a repertoire composed of one-act plays. The quartet consisted of Virginia Horsley, Pat Gilfeather, and Mr. and Mrs. Hackett, both of whom are actors in their own right. Two tours were taken by the group during the spring quarter, one through central Montana, and one along the northern "high-line" route. Besides these, several short trips were taken to towns near Helena. The lyceum followed largely the itinerary of the Glee Club and helped to strengthen the fine impression of Intermountain given by this organization. Five plays were included in their repertoire: The Pearls, The Proposal, The Lie That Jack Built, The Artist, and Dust of the Road. The first three were presented in a program in Helena, and the students had a chance to see the varied appeal and finished acting which made the lyceum so successful in its season's work.

"TURN TO THE RIGHT"

The Junior play was given this year at the Shrine Temple on April 6. Under the efficient direction of Prof. Hackett, a fine presentation of "Turn to the Right" was worked out, and the following cast of players showed unsuspected acting ability:

Isadore	Donald Horsley
Joe Bascom	Ivan Hughes
Muggs	Yale Lyman

Men's Glee Club

The Men's Glee Club this year made an enviable record, not only in Helena but all over the state of Montana. Starting early last fall with many old members back and several talented new ones, the club practiced faithfully and long. A trip contemplated during the Christmas vacation failed to materialize, but the two long trips and several shorter ones during the spring quarter more than compensated for the lack of the earlier one. The first tour of the club was through central Montana, the second took a more northerly route; on both trips the boys made a wonderful impression wherever they sang, and proved valuable advertising for the school. Their repertoire was large, varied, and pleasing, including quartets, solo numbers, and many special selections. The club also traveled to Boulder and to Missoula, where they made a two-days' stay. In Helena, they finished off a successful season with their concert given on May 25 at the Shrine Temple. Professor Royer and his men certainly deserve congratulations for their position as one of the liveliest organizations on the campus.

Women's Glee Club

Somewhat overshadowed by their brother organization, the Women's Glee Club has not been as active this year as heretofore. A late start was gotten last fall, and although a great deal of vocal talent turned out, the club did not get into shape until the second quarter. In February the girls held their own in a vesper concert with the men at St. Paul's Church, and showed what they really could do, given sufficient practice. They sang at several other functions during the spring, including the special concert on Baccalaureate Sunday. It is to be hoped that next year concert dates may be arranged for the Girls' Glee Club as well as for the men, and that this organization will regain its old pep and spirit.

Student Ministers

phase of college activity of which Intermountain has always been particularly proud is its student ministerial group. This year the number of students preparing for the ministry or some definite form of Christian work is larger than it has ever been before, as sixteen people have been enrolled under this aim. Three religious denominations are represented, and five members of the group are actively engaged in preaching at the present time. Two girls, one of whom is now filling a charge at Winston, are included in the number. All these students are particularly prominent in college activities, either on the Glee Club, the Panther Claws, or the Y. M. and Y. W. C. A. Three of the men, Art Moore, Clark Newton, Don Baldwin, together with Bob Dawson, will journey as a quartet to Seabeck Conference in June; while Esther Carlson, as president of the Y. W. C. A., will be present at the Women's Conference. Although Intermountain is not a theological school, we are pleased to have so many students in training for Christian service in the ministerial field.

Y. M.-Y. W. RECEPTION

At the annual Y. M.-Y. W. reception, held on September 28, the members of the cabinets of both organizations welcomed the new and old students. Arthur Moore gave an address of welcome, and Silver Maguire responded in verse for the Freshmen. A program and refreshments followed.

FACULTY RECEPTION.

On the 6th of October the students and friends of Intermountain were entertained by the faculty. The reception was one of the most delightful of the year. The chapel was transformed into a Japanese garden, and a pleasing program was presented by some of the faculty members, assisted by Rev. D. J. Donnan. Punch and wafers were served.

FRESHMAN PARTY

The annual get-acquainted party of the Freshman class was given this year on October 26, in the form of a costume party. There were many artistic and amusing costumes, and prizes were awarded to Helen Meyers and Kenneth Baldwin. A short program was held and Hallowe'en refreshments were served.

FOOTBALL BANQUET

The Football Banquet, one of the most prominent events of the school year, was held on the 7th of December at the Placer Hotel. The banquet room was decorated in school colors, and the program was very cleverly planned in remembrance of the special train to Butte, with Rev. Van de Mark as conductor-toastmaster. The football captainelect, Gordon Wilson, and the class princesses were introduced. The singing of "Intermountain" closed a most enjoyable affair.

CHRISTMAS PARTY

The Christmas party given under the anspices of the Y. M. and Y. W. C. A. was marked by the usual clever stunts and enjoyable program. After the Freshmen had won the prize for the most original skit, Santa Claus appeared and handed to everyone a token of his good will. Refreshments followed.

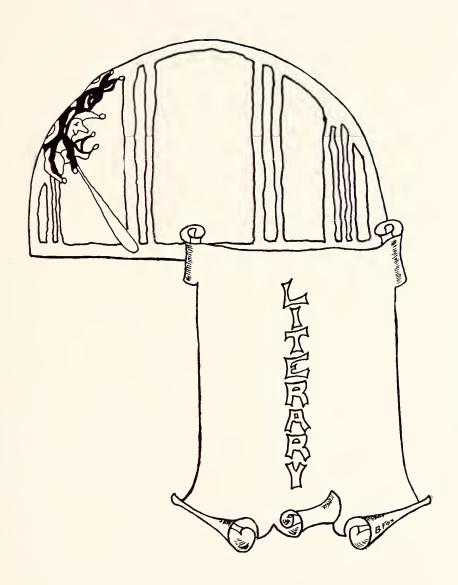

"I" CLUB SOCIAL

On the evening of January 11th a number of people gathered in Helena Hall very necertain as to what fate held in store for them. The "I" Club Basket Social was in progress. After a short, snappy program, Prof. David Jones acted as auctioneer in selling the many clever baskets made by the co-eds of I. U. C. After the contents of the baskets had disappeared, the evening was closed by the singing of school songs.

CAMPUS DAY BANQUET

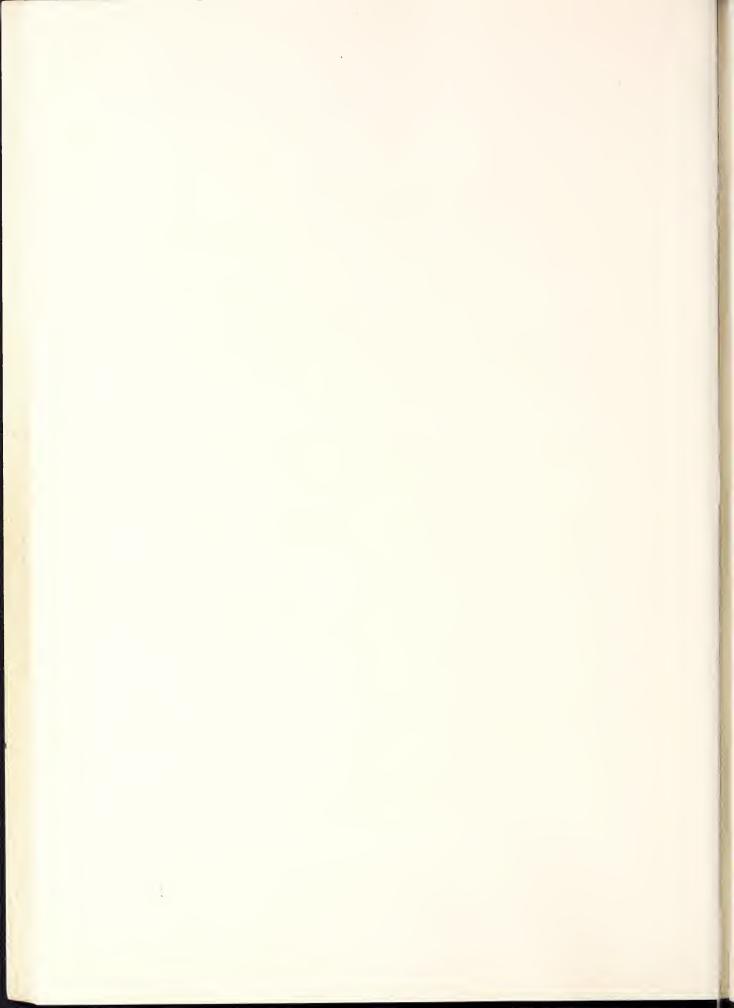

On April 19 at six-thirty the tired and sunburned students and faculty of Intermountain gathered at Mill Hall to be entertained after a strenuous day spent in cleaning the campus. Each class had a separate table in the dining room to decorate as they wished, and after dinner stunts were presented by the classes and faculty. The senior class won first prize for their table decorations, which represented a saloon of the early days. The faculty captured first prize for the stunts with a very amusing performance.

Lux Veritatis

Most shadows that men think they hate
Are mine;
But mixed with them some crawling
Toward a Light
Brighter than that in which the race
Still lives.
Lunar reflections of the true Sun-Source
They walk in;
Mental moonbeams, mind light, taken in
At second hand,
Suffice them well to find the things
They seek.

Should one reject all this past-given glow?
You ask—
Reject and loath the stuff of which One's cast?
Not so! Rather encouraged be because
We know
The moon is like in elements
To earth.

'Tis only we as yet face not
The Light—
Are only vaguely sensing now the turning
Which at last
Will bring us into brightest day
Of truth.

Men live yet in the night-time.
Of their thought.

See Genius as he is, inspiring earnest
Of our hope,
Revealing how the brilliance that he has
Is but
A little of the great, eternal whole—
The ultimate noon
Wherein all men shall move,
Day bred,
Eyes open to the brightest Absolute,
At home with Truth!

At home with Truth!
See Genius as he is: one man with what
All men shall have.
Watch, and learn how he turns to catch
The bright,
The blinding rays of all perfection.
Take challenge!

Take challenge!
Crawl with me ahead of earth to Time's horizon;
See the Truth now,

Nor wait the tortuous turning of the slow.

—Ralph Micken, '29.

West Wind

Sweeping through darkness—West wind blowing,
You make lonely
My sleep:
Restless my dreams
As you blow
Through the night.

Are you not weary,
Wind of the west?
Weary of striving,
Never at rest?
Sweeping through Darkness—
Elemental the power;
Man knows his loneliness
In such an hour.

Dawn brings no surcease; Still the trees strain; Snow, tossed in torment, Settles again. Three winds know happiness, Hurrying by; Bitter and wronged Is the west wind's cry.

Blow through the long day: Evening at last Shall find you Weary— Shall take you, comfortless, And give you Sleep.

-Elizabeth Waters, '30.

To Rabbi Ben Ezra

—After helping an old man to write a letter.

Think hard, man, do you like this getting old?
You call it consummation—it's decay.
Love you the thought of growing old with me?
Passing the heights of strength, then crumbling off
To nothingness?

Being firm, full of youth and force, then fading out?
Holding great thoughts serenely in the mind,
Then straining hard to catch and hold a word?
The best is yet to be! Damned heresy!
What good a flat existence when we've lived,
Felt love, known truth, seen hope,

And looked ahead?

The last of life; eyes fastened to the past,
Back turned to future, hoping that, perchance,
Unseeing we may part and pass the curtain
And be gone.

Vessels upon the wheel, well formed, indeed, But made of mud, to crumble and fall off Before complete.

-R. A. M.

The Gingham Dog and the Calico Cat

"Aw shut up and let me be comfortable, 'Rene. A man's got a right to be himself in his own home, ain't he?" With these scalding remarks, Mike Schultze jerked off the other shoe and placed his damp, steaming feet on the open oven door of the only stove in their two-room shack. Burning inside, Irene continued the preparation of the evening meal, silently taking the extra steps occasioned by the hulk of her husband stretched out on a chair with his back against the dining table and his feet in the oven; a formidable barrier with his soiled, greasy overalls, and grimy shirt. Now that they were married and were "settled down, Mike considered a daily shave superfluous and so his face was covered with a two-day growth of whiskers. At this opportune moment Mike Jr., six, patty, four, with candy-covered face, and toddling Roddy, left their game of bear in the other room and filed in to see what was up. Their fair-haired mother, in the act of scrubbing up from the rough pine floor some misdirected tobacco spit, paused, took the baby in one arm, and continued her work at the stove.

"Story, Daddy, story," pleaded the other two, scrambling up on the filthy overalls. In way of making an apology with humbling himself, Mike fondled his "kiddies" and was more than entertaining.

Then the table was set and supper was ready. Pulling in his arms and legs, Mike, without rising, turned his chair to the table and was ready to enjoy himself to his fill. With knife and fork in hand he was prepared for the potatoes and ham passed him by Irene, who sympathized with herself and furnished her own consolation for the unnoticed self-effacement she was accomplishing. But it was of no use.

Mike, for the sake of the children, please don't eat with your knife."

"That's all right, 'Rene, it's natural for me to. You know I wouldn't if we had company, but when there's no one here we might as well be ourselves." With the back of his hand he wiped some grease from his mouth and continued scooping up the food—the best he could provide.

Mike was Irish and liked an argument, and until he was shown that he was in the wrong he could be just as stubborn as 'Rene could be with her everlasting silence and too-apparent self-sacrifice. He poured his coffee out in the saucer and, raising it to his lips, met Irene's accusing stare. He set it down with a splash.

"Why in h—don't you say something? Can't you fight? Now don't spoil it all by starting to bawl. The time for that is when you've said all you can think of and haven't any more on yer tongue."

With flashing eyes, Irene met his challenge.

Mike Schultze, you are the slovenliest, coarsest, worst mannered brute I ever saw—" Much more followed. The children, taking their cue, silently filed back into the other room but not to resume their game. With wide-eyed fright they listened to the battle raging hot and heavy in the kitchen.

Pedigrees were laid bare and every mean thing that had taken place in the previous seven years was charged and defended. First one and then the other advanced the prosecution.

At length, without a single constructive thought having been uttered, a thorough understanding was reached. Just as when after a long sultry day, clouds suddenly rolled up, and a fierce thunder storm sends crackling bolts darting from one cloud to another and finally subsides after having spent its fury, so ended the Schultze encounter. The air was now much clearer after the purging rain.

Mike, who had resumed eating—with his fork—suddenly looked up and ventured: "Rene, tomorrow's Sunday. Whaddyou say we pack up a lunch and have a picnic out at Broadwater?"

Aged Pioneer Makes Pilgrimage to Last Chance Gulch

"Want a lift, uncle?" inquired a Helena-bound motorist of a bent little figure tottering along the highway. But the little old brownie did not heed the invitation. (The old man was deaf.) Too, he was absorbed in scanning the blue hills and the limits of a city he had not visited in thirty years. The motorist persuaded him to accept a ride and slowly they entered the city for it was apparent that this was a pilgrimage back to a spot long cherished. Slowly they swung into Main street from the north. Approaching the Empson building the passenger exclaimed in a voice smothered by a bushy beard:

"There! there! that's where Sillers had his livery stable, and over here was a blacksmith shop," he added pointing to the Central Pharmacy. "All gone now, all gone, all—" and he fell muttering in inaudible tones. The car moved on toward the Power block. Again he called out,

"The Postoffice was here and we used to tie our teams right over—" but the voice had again died away, and the eyes followed the thoughts back, back, three, four, five decades. The car was barely moving. Exasperated motorists elipped by in sleek limousines but the old pioneer did not see bodies by Fisher but buckboards filled with women in crinoline, and sun bonnets. Light delivery trucks were the ghosts of arched schooners, and the mule teams with clanking chains and squeaking harness lunged past as freighters from Fort Benton called greetings to the passenger. As the car neared Wood at Main street he laid his hand on the driver's arm. "Stop I want to get out here and look around on the old sites of Gans and

"Stop I want to get out here and look around on the old sites of Gans and Klein, Sands Bros., and C. K. Wells stationery and drug. Bridge street was right up this a-way," he said more to himself than his acquaintance. For him the old Bristol Hotel loomed up and the display of Loble and Co. D. G. obliterated that of Weggenman's Meat Market.

"Loble used to peddle his wares from door to door before the fire and the coming of Fligelman. After his arrival they moved down the street. None of this was here when I first came north and west." The car continued on up the gulch and it was clear that here was the old stamping ground that strained at the miner's heart strings. Intently he gazed at the narrow walls on either side of the canyon. A slow smile spread over the face lined and leathered with experience and exposure. In memory the miner renewed the old pals of the days of the gold bonanza. From roofless log cabins hugging the ground and faded dwellings clinging to the steep cliffs mute greetings came out to him. He climbed the steep hillside to the Woods cabin where the first settlers met and named their gold find St. Helena. Now the street was practically deserted, then it was bustling with activity. The old trail-blazer found a rickety chair in front of the low log cabin and rested and mused on the by-gone glory. Before him stood and ice plant and a riding academy but he beheld them without seeing them. The teeming mass of gold panners were working feverishly, donkeys laden with ore sacks weaved in and out among the throng. With picks and drills men were gouging ore from the find. Children played in the road but their rompers were leather or goat chapperos and they angled a lariat or toyed with a derringer. The old man saw in this abandoned camp, snow-bound miners coming back to civilization after an absence of a year and heading for the saloons and gambling huts in search of novelty and companionship. On the drive back to Helena he looked long at the ruins of the Bucket of Blood where in the old days gold dust in bags, ore, money, ranches, sheep, everything negotiable passed across the table to the gambling sharks or to the "hurdy gurdy" girls of easy virtue. "Gone, gone," he muttered, "all gone." Chinese and negroes mingled on the "Gone, gone," he muttered, "all gone." Chinese and negroes mingled on the street. Clore street had been gutted and the ugly, disheveled shacks and disorderly rear entrances to Main street buildings disfigured the view. Here an aged darky with a bulging sack skuddled across the road. Time had shifted and Last Chance Gulch was now the chinatown of Helena. Helena had grown up and moved west and the old prospector too had almost reached the horizon in the same direction.

Part Surendalin. Dearest Here's wishing you all kind of Colob and success in the future. As years roll by and no you climb the ladder of success don't forget me - Bill Bower.

Dear agnese: you don't know what you have meant to me this year. Perhaps you didn't realize at what time have you were holding me up but you were holding me up but you is enough to say but you'll alway fanour what I think. May you always have the life you deserve. Just Isakel. Dear agnèse; Them's my sentimente " Seriously, agnese, you have given me much comfort and inspiration through your talks and just the fact that you've been around - more than sjan'll ever know, perhaps. Let this not be the end of it, but write to me - your letters will mean so much to me. Lear agnese - Since this in the Issage of the laworedones of mulatwrite the von perforce !! Thanks tota for your lovely green hat. I, too, was your "little six" at one time but land did not profit by it as much as I should have been back I have known you better land likedyou much more than I did that other year. Perhaps we have both changed. If could just continue to change with you as my examplealyce. I'm sure I would be appreciated more. Some day you may be back to the old school and I think I'll enjoy staying here so maybe well meet again and by that time I'll have started on that much needed change - Best wisher; Clarile Dear agnere: aprire foundship has meant a great deal to me. agnere, you have such an individual and remarkable personality - - I know I shall remember you always as you have been to me this year, you have been an impiration to me toward something bigger and better and I have so enjoyed our talks together - wish there sould have been many more of them. I'm so glad you carne back to I. U. C. this year and too, I'm glad first impressions don't always remain the same. I hope I shall always have a worm some in your heast, your red-top "B. es."
